Four Ways to Sharpen Your Decision-Making Skills in Business

- DATA OVERLOAD
Learn to focus on the information and data that you need to make decision and try to tune out the rest.
- DELEGATE, DELEGATE, DELEGATE
As you move up and take on more responsibilities, learn what decisions and activities you can pass on to younger colleagues. Mentor and guide them to help them make the most of the opportunity.
- WELCOME MISTAKES
Understand that many decisions you make won't always be right. Embrace errors and learn from them to make better calls next time.
- SKIP DECISIONS
Focus on the decisions that are important and need to be made urgently. Skip those that don't or can wait.
